This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

EXPLANATORY REMARKS.

PLAN AND USES OF THIS UNDERTAKING.

Ever since the publication of the Lawyers' Directory made generally known the fact that we had devoted much attention to the state of the legal profession, the frequency of the applications, both personally and by letter, from all parts of the Union for information such as is contained in the following pages, has confirmed the conviction that the business community have long felt the want of some more accessible and reliable means for obtaining it than is at present possessed. The increased facility for travel, conveying persons, in a few days, from one extremity of the country to the other; the unexampled extension of commercial intercourse not many years past established between the remotest portions; the recent improvements and inventions, rendering time no longer essential for the transmission of intelligence from the farthest points, bringing the whole Union into the close relation of neighbors, and making vast and varied commercial and business transactions between citizens of the several states matters of daily occurrence, conduce to render a list, giving the name of at least one efficient and reliable lawyer (or law firm) in every shire town, and in each of the principal cities and villages of the Union, who shall at all times hold himself ready and willing to transact promptly, with fidelity, and for a reasonable compensation, such professional business as may be intrusted to him—a desideratum, almost an absolute necessity to professional and business men. From the want of it, those who, heretofore, have had occasion for legal services at remote places, have generally been compelled to engage an attorney of whose capacity and integrity they had no reliable information, thus incurring considerable risk; or if, as was however seldom the fact, the case would admit of delay, correspondence with distant parties has been necessarily resorted to for the purpose of ascertaining the name of some competent and reliable lawyer, thereby occasioning loss of time seriously detrimental in affairs, which from their nature, usually require speedy action.

But, as the value and utility of this catalogue to the public, as well as to the lawyers named therein, must depend chiefly upon the integrity and sound professional qualifications of the latter, it is not enough merely to allege the work to be the result of a laborious correspondence and of large expenditures, but it is proper also, that our facilities for obtaining reliable information, and the manner in which the names have been selected, should be made known.

First, therefore, as to our facilities. It is well known that, in 1849, we conceived and carried out the plan of publishing, for the use of the national bar, a "Lawyers' Directory," containing the name and residence of every attorney in the United States, and denoting those practising, retired from practice, or on the bench. No similar publication having before appeared, the enterprise was entirely new; but, the work found such favor with the profession generally that in pursuance of the urgent solicitation of lawyers in every part of the country, we issued a revised and corrected edition annually up to the present year, 1857—the "Directory," or rather the "Law Register," as it is termed for the last year, containing the addresses of about thirty-two thousand lawyers. In the yearly preparation of that work we were necessarily brought into correspondence, not only with the most prominent members of the bar in every county, but with the several judicial and county officers, such as judges, clerks of superior courts, county clerks, circuit clerks, district clerks, sheriffs, registers, recorders, etc., and it is mainly through the aid of these gentlemen, together with that hereafter mentioned, we hope to be enabled to place the public in possession of the names of capable and reliable lawyers at nearly every point in the United States.

Second, as to the manner of compiling the list. In selecting the names of such lawyers in this catalogue as were not personally known to us, we first addressed, either to a correspondent of proved integrity, or to a judicial or county officer, on whose statements we could rely, and whose facilities for information would best enable him to answer our questions, the following LETTER.

"157 Broadway, New-York.

"Dear Sir: To aid in establishing a system whereby merchants and other business men may attain safety and facility in making collections, and the transaction of such other legal matters as they may have occasion to require, we desire to ascertain whether there is a capable and reliable lawyer in your county, and if so, we ask that you will give the name of one residing at the principal place in your county, who is prompt, efficient, and trustworthy. To furnish more particular and full information, please answer the following questions, adding also any suggestions or remarks you may deem necessary to enable us to form an opinion as to the propriety of your selection. As the value of your reply must depend upon the integrity and sound professional qualifications of the lawyer you shall name, we hope you will select one entitled to the fullest confidence of the business community—experienced and competent, efficient and reliable—having a well-established reputation for ability and integrity, and to whom professional business can be intrusted without fear of loss."

"This information being desired to enable us to prepare a catalogue of capable and reliable lawyers throughout the United States, for the use of the business public, a prompt and careful reply, uninfluenced by feelings of personal friendship, will confer a favor on the community as well as ourselves. If desired, your communication will, of course, be deemed private."

"Very respectfully."

QUESTIONS.

"1. Who is an efficient and trustworthy collecting lawyer in your county?"

"2. What is his age?"

"3. How long have you known him?"

"4. Is he a native of your county? and if not, what is his native place?"

"5. How many years has he practised in your county?"

"6. Is he industrious and attentive to his legal business?"

"7. Is he a man of integrity and ability?"

"8. Is he the owner of property, and if so, how much?"

"9. Could one safely trust to him the collection of large claims, withou reference to his pecuniary means?"

"10. Does he devote his attention exclusively to the practice of the law, or is he also otherwise engaged, and if so, in what business?"

"11. Is he often away from home, and if so, does he, while absent, leave competent persons in charge of his practice?"

"12. Do you know of any persons in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Chicago, or other large cities, for whom he has transacted business, or with whom he is personally acquainted, and if so, please name them?"

If our correspondent, in reply to the foregoing letter, sent (as was the case in most instances) the name of a lawyer whom we believed to be competent and trustworthy, and also gave such replies to the questions accompanying the letter, as induced us to think he had made a good selection, we addressed a letter of inquiry to another correspondent in the same county, and if his answers were also satisfactory, we adopted the selection first made. But wherever a difference of opinion was expressed by our second correspondent, we wrote to a third, and in some cases a fourth, and in fact spared no pains until we believed concurrent testimony pointed out some one lawyer as competent and reliable, or else established the fact that there was not such a one in the county. Having, in this manner completed our catalogue, we issued a small edition, which we took care should have but a limited circulation, and that only in directions where it would be likely to meet with friendly hints and corrections if such were necessary, our object in so doing being to insure the correctness of the present edition, which though nominally the second, is in fact the first that has been prepared with a view to any extended circulation amongst the public. Upon the appearance of such limited edition, which was essentially erroneous, we received from correspondents in all parts, many valuable suggestions; and the experience derived from its publication, showed that notwithstanding all these precautionary measures, others still were requisite, the plan being somewhat defective, insomuch as some of these sources of information could not, in every instance, be relied on. Hence, as the undertaking can be rendered of service to the profession and to community, only by the attainment of its avowed object, for the purpose of obtaining more accurate intelligence as to the reliability of the information thus derived, it was determined to divide each state into from five to fifteen districts, and to select one lawyer of large practice, and of well-known and established integrity, faithfulness, and capacity, and mostly confide to him the revision of selections made as above stated, for his district,—his communications being treated as secret, and a suitable compensation being paid to him for this service, to be annually performed. Virginia, for example, being divided into five judicial sections, we have the name of such a gentleman in each, who revises the selection for his district, thus making it entirely reliable; for, feeling that his character and interests are involved, it is believed he will not only be exceedingly careful to perform the duty faithfully, but will see that any delinquents there may prove to be at the end of the year are stricken from the list, and their places supplied by suitable names. Where our personal information was insufficient, we derive, mostly from judicial officers in the various states, the advice necessary to enable us to make these territorial divisions and selections.

Thus, we see that nearly all the lawyers whose names appear in this catalogue, not only come recommended by the concurrent testimony of the most respectable officers of every county, who have the best opportunity of judging of the relative merits of lawyers, as well as by the highest professional judgment of their own state; but, we may add that numerous and highly respectable references, among whom are some of the most wealthy and respectable merchants, have given such evidence concerning many of them as offers to the public a most satisfactory guarantee of their integrity and capacity, and leaves no doubts as to the propriety of the selections. It may not be improper also to say, that a very large proportion of the gentlemen whose names appear in the following pages, are personally known to us, and we can assure all that they are entitled to the fullest confidence of the business community. We are aware that the present edition of the catalogue is not complete, no correspondents being named for many of the counties, yet, so far as the list goes, we believe it is altogether reliable.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED AND ADVANTAGES CONSIDERED.

It affords no small gratification to be enabled to state, that by far the greater number of such members of the profession, in all parts of the Union, as have been corresponded with, have expressed their cordial approbation of the present enterprise, and their desire to co-yperate therein; But candor demands the admission that some few have raised doubts and objections. Some lawyers, for example, who do not find time to give the subject sufficient consideration, have supposed the Law Register sufficient to supply the wants of community. That this, however, is not the case, and that, although a convenient manual for certain purposes, the Law Register is wholly inadequate to the object contemplated in the present undertaking, and is deficient in the only information that could render it of much service to the man of business, abundant proof has been furnished by the correspondence of agents for that work, who state that almost the sole inquiry by merchants is for the address of efficient and trustworthy lawyers, and they express the belief that a list of such would prove acceptable to nearly every man engaged in trade, and be found of greater value than all the Law Registers ever published. One of these agents, writing from Philadelphia, says: "On being told that book contains the name of every lawyer, without distinction, a merchant replied: 'The work would be of little use to me, because it does not show who are good and safe lawyers; hence, if I should send claims to a person, chosen at random therefrom, he might prove to be one of those who would collect and keep my money; and as I have thousands of dollars now in the hands of such, which I expect never to be able to obtain, I have concluded to forward no more business to any attorney about whose integrity I have not reliable information. I want a trusty and efficient lawyer for every county in the United States, and for a list of such I am willing to subscribe.'"

Digitized by Google

We may further add, that being fully convinced of the superiority and advantages of the system developed in these pages, not only over the Law Register, but over every association or plan heretofore adopted, we do not intend ever again to prepare another edition of the Law Register, as the issue of quarterly or more frequent editions of this catalogue, properly revised and corrected, will supersede its necessity, and render the work of comparatively little value.

Again, it has been objected that although the present plan affords a very sure means of bringing the names of certain lawyers prominently before the business community, and though it contains sufficient evidence of the merit of those so introduced, yet, by the manner in which this is done, it says in effect, if not in words, that they are the only ones fit and proper to be entrusted with business. This objection is founded upon a misconception of the system, from which no such inference can be drawn, and which contemplates nothing so unjust and unprofessional. The catalogue will simply make known to the public the fact that those whose names have been inserted therein, have been ascertained to be efficient and reliable, and this it may surely do without being held to convey the inference, that there are not other attorneys equally worthy and meritorious. Again, a few look upon the system as a mere means of advertising, and as such raise the following objection: they say, admitting it to be right and proper for an attorney, as a solicitant for business, to bring his name before the public as prominently as he pleases, and in every way that is fair and honorable, yet that every other means of advertising differs from the one now proposed to be established, inasmuch as the former are open to all who choose to pay for them, while of the latter only those can avail themselves who have been selected for a place in the catalogue. To objectors of this class we would reply, that the establishment of a system of advertising is not the sole, or even the principal object contemplated in the present undertaking. Its principal object, as stated in the earlier part of these remarks, is to supply the business community generally, with information of which they stand in great need, and if this can not be done without conferring advantages upon certain lawyers, which others do not possess, any objections which the former may entertain to being thus distinguished should be regarded as mere personal scruples, and made to give way to considerations for the public good. But, to those who are associated with the enterprise it may be as well, in order to avoid any misconception, to repeat that there is no invidious distinction proposed to be conferred upon them in the insertion of their names in the catalogue, nor is any thing unfair towards others contemplated, all that is proposed, being to give a guarantee to the public that certain lawyers have been ascertained to be efficient and reliable without instituting any comparisons whatever.

Digitized by Google

But, even if considered as a mere means of advertising, the plan is not only wholly unobjectionable, but vastly superior. While the work will be useful and safe to the community, it cannot fail to prove convenient and profitable to correspondents; and it may not be amiss briefly to suggest a few of the benefits and advantages which must accrue to themselves from the publication of their names in the catalogue, at the same time regretting that the length to which these remarks have already extended leaves so little space to be devoted to this purpose. Its uses to every correspondent are four-fold:

First. It will secure to its correspondents much of the most valuable business emanating from all the principal cities in the Union.

Second. It will secure to its correspondents a profitable extension of business, by leading to a close intercourse between them, thus making correspondents the local agents for one another, since each having a satisfactory guarantee that all the others are competent and reliable, will naturally turn to the list when he requires an agent at any given point.

Third. As at least 20,000 copies of the catalogue will be published quarterly, it places his name more generally, prominently and advantageously before the merchants and business men of every city and large town in the United States, than could be done by any means of mere advertising, thereby offering to the world an extended and favorable knowledge of his position and qualifications, and concentrating into his office, business from all parts of the Union. The Law Register being no longer issued, this enterprise affords the public the only ready and easily accessible means of ascertaining the names of competent and reliable lawyers.

Fourth. It contains none of the objectionable arrangements as to division of profits, which are to be found in other enterprises of a similar character, the projectors of which acting as a kind of middle-men between the public and the attorneys, take care to intercept a considerable proportion of the profits which the latter make out of any business they may obtain from such sources.

In this connection we must state the arrangements for publishing and circulating the forthcoming catalogue. After undergoing such revision, corrections, and additions as may from time to time be rendered necessary by dissolutions of firms, changes, deaths, etc., the future editions of the catalogue will be published at least as often as quarterly, and copies of each edition will be forwarded to every correspondent, as well as to the postmasters of the larger places. The work will also be forwarded from the publication office by mail, postage paid, on receipt of twenty-five cents in postage-stamps. Copies will also be furnished to booksellers in all the principal cities and villages in the United States, where each edition may be had at a merely nominal price. These arrangements for the general circulation of the work throughout every county in the United States, have been, and others will be made, so as to afford the whole community equal facilities for the transaction of professional business, as well as enable all those whose names appear in the catalogue to derive the greatest practical benefit from its publication. As the cost of multiplying copies of the catalogue, when once in type, is very small, it is contemplated to publish at least twenty thousand copies of each future edition.

An addition to the present issue, and which will be adhered to in future editions, consists of an alphabetical index of the towns and cities in which the lawyers may be found. This improvement is made in compliance with numerous requests of correspondents, whose valuable suggestions we must acknowledge, and one of whom, a merchant writing from Cincinnati, says: "Since the first number of the catalogue came to hand I have used it frequently, and consider it invaluable. But I suggest that the insertion of an index, giving the names of the cities and towns, alphabetically, would add to its convenience, for as merchants keep the run of their business by towns and cities instead of counties, it would enable them the more readily to refer to the correspondents, more especially as in many instances they do not know the county in which their debtors reside. Hence, without an index, they must either go over the list for the whole state, or refer to a post office guide or gazetteer, to find the county in which the town is located."

We merely ask all to give the undertaking that respectful consideration to which it is entitled. We are aware of no defects in the system, yet if such there be, we wish information of the fact; for the object being to render the enterprise convenient and profitable to the lawyers selected, as well as useful and safe to the public, as a medium for the transaction of professional business, we shall willingly endeavor to remove any objectionable features that may come to our knowledge. To this end we shall be glad to receive any suggestions which may be useful in revising the list, or which can in any way aid in improving or carrying out more fully the design, as we desire to bring to its management the combined wisdom and experience of many able and reliable lawyers, and thus establish a system as permanent and lasting as it shall be useful to the business community and profitable to its participants.

WHAT THE ENTERPRISE IS NOT LIKE.

Many correspondents, averse to certain institutions, known as "mercantile" or "commercial agencies," and aware of the odium not unfrequently resulting from a connection with such, after expressing views as to their objectionable features, in terms of greater or less severity, have desired to know whether the present system contemplated any similar business. We reply, this undertaking is in no way analogous to such institutions, and is not, therefore, amenable to the objections urged against them. Whether all that has been said against those establishments is true to its fullest extent, we are not prepared to determine; but their mode of operation being secret, it is not surprising they should be looked upon with disfavor by all parties not immediately connected with them; for, the constitution of the human mind is such, that it abhors every system which, whether in theory or practice, cannot expose itself to the light of day. If, therefore, as has been urged by their advocates, such institutions are essential to enable merchants in large cities to obtain information concerning the standing and credit of their customers, perhaps the condemnatory voice of the public is correct in regarding them as at best mere necessary evils. Personally, we desire to make no allegations against them, nor do we wish to join the advocates of their supression; indeed, we have no objections to gentlemen appearing in this catalogue, and at the same time corresponding with a mercantile agency; although it is proper to add, no person can, from the fact that he is herein named, be required to perform any service whatever without adequate compensation, or to furnish reports of the business men of his district, from barbers up to bankers, or to transact any other than legitimate legal business. No connection with a mercantile agency affords its correspondents facilities for the transaction of business abroad, for the reason that its operations being necessarily of a secret and confidential character, they do not know one another.

A gentleman writing from Louisana, says: "I consider it far beneath the dignity of the profession of a lawyer to act the spy, and periodically report, to an institution which retails his slanders to the world, every loss or unfortunate circumstance that may befall his mercantile friends and acquaintances. The man who reports every misfortune or mishap of his neighbors, and gives information as to their circumstances and habits, with a view of forming an opinion as to their property, or giving and refusing them future credit, is the very last one to whom they will intrust their business, yet he who performs this disreputable service, to the great injury of his own character, not only gains no advantages for his services, but seldom receives compensation." Though many of the correspondents for commercial agencies may be, and doubtlessly are worthy men, yet it is probable the connection does not add to the regard in which they are held; and if, for the sake of expected business from abroad, they are required to make drafts upon their character at home, then, as in all cases where the permanent benefit of a good name is exchanged for the temporary and doubtful advantages of pecuniary gain, it cannot be questioned who is the loser. It being known that the nature of the services required, and the uncertainty of the remuneration are such as generally to preclude the good and respectable attorneys from acting for such institutions not only are many merchants who avail themselves of their facilities for reports as to the condition of customers, unwilling to make use of them for the purposes of making their collections, but it is said the agencies themselves are compelled to resort to the practice of reporting to their customers the fallacy that "their collecting attorneys are not their reporters."

Moreover, so strong has been the feeling created in many portions of the country, against reporting correspondents, that, greatly to their injury, it has frequently found vent in the local press. To show the tenor of these articles, we select as a sample from the many falling under our observation, the following, which first appeared in the Columbia (S. C.) Carolinian, of Sept. 9, 1856, and was subsequently published in the New York Herald, and other city papers of large circulation. We give the article verbatim, omitting only the names of individuals, from a desire to do no injury to the character of any person:

COMMERCIAL SPIES.

* * * * * * *

"While therefore, the proper and just rules of trade should be left to govern mercantile transactions, there are features connected with the machinery for practical working highly objectionable, as violating private rights, inflicting unnecessary injury, and involving principles capable of expansion to the untold damage of the entire South in its vital part. Such excrescences, wherever found, should be lopped off in some way, either by strong public condemnatory sentiment, or by legal enactment. Chief among these is the system of espionage kept up by what are called commercial agencies, through which the financial standing, money operations, personal habits, etc., of country merchants and business men, whether likely to contract debts at the North or not, are semi-annually or annually reported to the principal offices. This commercial agency, or spy system, ramifies throughout every town and hamlet of the country, and centres in the large Northern cities. It weakens faith, saps business enterprise, and often inflicts gross wrong upon the innocent through blunders or a settled design to wreak private malice.

* * * * * * *

"When it is recollected that the person and character of spies are detected and avoided as contamination, and that the information sought must be obtained stealthily, it will be apparent that great inaccuracies must enter into these reports. We have known by common report, strangers—utterly ignorant even of the persons of those whose affairs they were investigating—make reports of the business standing of perhaps one hundred gentlemen, after no more than two weeks' inquiry, in one of the central towns of our State. Generally, however, and whenever a resident can be found temeritous enough to accept, they seek out young lawyers, or others equally active, who are native and to the manor born. The compensation varies with the service. For two reports a year, if our information be not incorrect, the usual pay is forty or fifty dollars. If a lawyer happen to be the agent, to him the commercial agency directs any collection business it may influence. Thus hope of gain covers up the worst features of the system, and often reconciles honorable men otherwise, to the degrading employment. The facts or errors (for private hate can safely enter into these reports, and work irreparable injury to private character or credit) are entered upon the books of the agency in several cities, and are accessible to such merchants as pay the fees of examination. Then, whenever a country merchant appears in the Atlantic cities, whose standing, or solvency, or character, it is desirable to know, these tell-tale agencies are resorted to, and reveal all their books contain. Let a sheriff's office hold a single judgment against the luckless wight, no matter how small its amount, and, all unsuspicious of the coming blow, his credit is severely compromised, if not utterly blasted, and cash or city acceptance are the stringent terms exacted. Let a man have a home enemy in one of these reporters, and personal malevolence will do its work, steal his credit from him far from home and friends, rob his family of support, and perhaps consign him to bankruptcy.

"We regret to say we have heard of such agents among members of the legal profession in South Carolina—in Charleston and Columbia—and doubtless they may be found in other portions of the State. This, to our mind, is one of the excrescences to which should be applied the knife of indignant public opinion, so that no man may have the temerity to accept the office without meeting the reprobation of the community. If the system be fair and legitimate, let the names of the agents be published to the world, so that they may be known—at least to be men of integrity and honor. But until this be done we regard it a tyranny—a stabber in the dark—and one that should not be suffered to exist in the present state of political and social agitation in the country."

Whether the foregoing epistolary and editorial remarks are altogether just and true, we are unable to say, having never had any connection with similar institutions, but they are sufficient to show the fact, that there is a strong hostility existing against such, and it is therefore desirable to avoid misapprehension.

Yet, though mercantile agencies, even when imperfectly organized, may be of advantage to merchants in large cities, the benefits now conferred upon attorneys connected with them are few, and the business obtained through them is generally of a desperate character, as has been proved by the experience of many, and is evident for the following reasons, in addition to those above mentioned:

I. The inducements offered to correspondents are not sufficient to retain them any length of time. They constantly decline to act, few of them having ever received sufficient business to compensate them for stationery, expenses of postage, and time consumed in keeping up the necessary and incessant correspondence. A gentleman, who until recently was agent in Philadelphia for the most extensive agency, alleges that the largest New York office, with all its connections and efforts, does not send out or control one sixth of the business that is controlled by a law and collection office in that city.

II. The business and collections of the subscribers, the only compensation generally offered to correspondents, can not be concentrated, merchants being generally reluctant to use the collection department of the agency for securing the doubtful debts, for the following reasons:

1. The agency thus learns, to some extent, the weakness and losses of the subscriber, and can use the information to his disadvantage at associate offices, where he is reported.

2. It alarms other creditors, and induces them to push the debtor at the same time; (the agency being bound to subscribers to advise all alike, can not permit any one creditor to forestall others.)

3. The agency will not guarantee, in any case, the responsibility of correspondents. They are unknown even to the parties employing them, and in case of difficulty there is no recourse, for the system being based upon secret and confidential relations, the agency can not disclose names.
